50 Belgian Already
Lined Up To Be Shot

Killed by Train

Last Sunday morning Train
No. 22 on the L. & N. North of James Cotton, killing him almost instantly.

Ostend, (Via London) — The
power of Free Masonry is illustrated by a story told here by a citizen of Louvain, who with the Masonic sign, says he saved fifty of his fellow citizens from being shot to death by German troops.

This group of citizens, according to the racital of the Belgian

Mason, had been lined up for execution. The German firing party had their rifles at "present arms" when the narrator gave a Masonic sign. The German officer commanding the firing squad happened to belong to the craft. He recognized a brother

Mason and ordered the Louvain

Free Mason to leave the ranks.

This meant sparing his life. The Louvain citizen, however, refused saying:

"My fellow citizens are no more guilty than I am. If you are going to kill them I shall be with them." The German officer thereupon ordered the release of the entire party. — Louisville Her-

It is said by those who witnessed

Cooper To Have

Big Bread Line

Proceeds From Sale of Celebrated Tanlac to Feed Poor

Louisville April 8th. L. T. Cooper, the noted "Tanlac Man," will establish and maintain, at his own personal expense, a "bread line" in Louisville this winter. Mr. Cooper conceived and began executing this idea as quietly as he performed his remarkable relief work among the Dayton flood sufferers in 1913.

Louisville will, therefore, be unique in its relation with the rest of the country, because this city will have the only "bread line" outside of New York and maybe a few other larger cities of the world, where the plan has been established and is now maintained by the charitable organizations.

Mr. Cooper spent the afternoon looking over several available locations for the "bread line" and he will probably be prepared to state definitely by today just where the work will be carried on. He has also been in communication with local bakeries, and an agreement with reference to the bread and coffee supply has been practically reached.

Mr. Cooper, who is one of the most magnanimous of men, has always been in sympathy with the poor and unfortunate. The "bread line" will therefore be only another exemplification of his nature. A large percentage of the profits from the sale of his celebrated preparation, Tanlac, the medicine that is accomplishing such remarkable results in cases of catarrh, stomach, liver and kidney troubles, will be devoted to charity and her children in this city.

In commenting upon this great undertaking, Mr. Cooper said:

"Since a mere boy, I have always been inclined to help those who were less fortunate than myself, and in each city I visit I have invariably shown my sympathy for the poor by performing some service at my own personal expense that would bring a bit of genuine charity directly to them. I can, therefore, imagine nothing, among the several charitable plans I now have in mind, that will prove of as much benefit as a 'bread line.' The necessary details connected with the plan will be perfected by me this week.

Tanlac, the celebrated medicine now being introduced by Mr. Cooper, can be bought in Barbourville at Herndon Drug Company. —Advt.

THE NAVY MENU: HOW PURCHASED, PREPARED AND FINALLY SERVED

By W. R. RYAN.

If "the Little Corporal" had been an admiral instead of the world's most famous general he would have probably applied the following fundamental truth to the soldiers of the sea when he said that "no army travels on its belly," for, whether on land or sea, bodily fuel is indispensable.

If you have ever had the good fortune to witness a company of Uncle Sam's sailors on parade you have undoubtedly felt a wave of admiration and pride surge over you at the sight of so magnificent a body of men, exhibiting health and strength in every line. And you have perhaps pondered the causes that combine to produce such stalwart specimens of manhood, for in no nation in the world is there finer, stronger, healthier body of men than those who man the fighting ships of the United States navy.

One of the most important factors contributing to achieve this physical perfection in the naval personnel is the food—the "ration," as the three meals a day are termed. It is upon the foundation of food hygiene that the other health giving factors in our man-of-war's men's daily routine find a perfect base on which to build.

The ration components are fixed by law, which specifically states what articles of food and how much of each shall be served to the enlisted personnel daily. Thus the task is set to procure the different items of food and see that they are prepared in a manner calculated to make them most attractive and nutritious.

Marketing for the navy has been evolved into a most elaborate and scientific system, and when it is considered that the navy market basket must provide for over 50,000 men every day it is apparent that the task is no small one. Like the wise, discriminating housewife, the government demands and gets always the best in quality and purity in every article of food that is purchased for the men. Take, for example, from among the innumerable items comprising the ration, the principal item, meat. This one item is purchased in great quantities, from 50,000 to 1,000,000 pounds being not infrequently purchased at one time. This meat, including several kinds, such as beef, pork, veal, fowl, etc., is purchased after advertising for bids which must be based on carefully prepared specifications that will admit of only the best products the markets of the world afford being accepted. When the contract has been consummated and deliveries commence, expert inspectors are detailed to see that the smallest detail of the specifications as to quality, purity, etc., is rigidly compiled with, and not one pound is accepted until these government experts have assured themselves of entire compliance in every respect with the letter of the specifications and warrant.

The same elaborate system of specifications and inspections which governs the purchase and delivery of this one item of the navy menu is just as judicious and scientific as applied to every other individual component of the ration, including butter, eggs and spuds (Irish potatoes) down to canned tomatoes. The religious degree of adherence to the prescribed specifications for each and every item purchased can perhaps best be illustrated by reciting that in one delivery of about 8000 dozen eggs, ordered under navy contract, 33 per cent of them were rejected as not conforming strictly to the required standard for fresh eggs. The specifications for the different items of fresh and dry provisions are interpreted very literally, and cold storage eggs, like oleomargarine, never find their way to the enlisted man's table.

Nor does food inspection cease at this point, for the naval instructions require that upon delivery aboard ship "a medical officer shall inspect as to quality all fresh food purchased for the general mess," and thus the wisdom of the following extract from the naval instructions is apparent:

"Orders for the fresh provisions to be taken on board preparatory to leaving port shall always call for delivery sufficiently in advance of the time set for sailing to make it entirely practicable to secure satisfactory provisions in replacement in the event that the delivery made by any contractor should prove on inspection to be not entirely up to specifications in every respect."

And so it is that when the navy's market basket is filled its contents are such as would make the eye of a pure food expert sparkle with pleasure.

The same degree of care and system which is bestowed in filling the larder applies equally in the preparation of the food for the sailors' table. This work is delegated to a corps of skilled, efficient cooks and bakers whose culinary ability and versatility make mealtime aboard ship such welcome occasion. And these men know their art well, for they are given a very comprehensive course of study and practical work in these branches of domestic science at the training station at Newport or San Francisco before they qualify for the rating of their vocation on board ship, where, under the direction of a commissioned officer of the Pay Corps, they bake bread and pies and concoct all manner of tempting dishes which any good housewife would be proud to acknowledge as her own product, with the result that the same manner as the family table at home is administered, and every one is satisfied with just as much of everything as he wants.

The daily bill of fare is by no means stereotyped, for it varies every day and is never the same this week as it was the week before.

In contrast with the present day general mess aboard ship it is interesting to look back and see how a hundred years ago our sailors lived in this respect. In those days the men did not have tables upon which to eat, but spread a "mess cloth" upon the deck in their respective gun rooms and squatted on the floor around the festive cloth. The ration then, as now, was governed by law, which specified exactly what articles and how much of each would be issued to the men daily, and the following extract from the law approved March 27, 1794, is herewith quoted to show how frugal was the sailor's menu in those days:

Sunday—One pound of bacon and one quart of peas or beans.

Monday—One pound of bread, one pound of pork, half pint of peas or beans, four ounces of turnips.

Tuesday—One and one-half pounds of beef, one pound of potatoes or turnips and pudding.

Wednesday—Two ounces of butter or in lieu thereof six ounces of molasses, four ounces of cheese and half pint of rice.

Thursday—One pound of pork, half pint of peas or beans and four ounces of cheese, and there shall be allowed one-half pint of distilled spirits per day or four ounces of rum.

Friday—One pound of salt fish, two ounces of butter or one gill of oil and one pound of potatoes.

Saturday—One pound of pork, half pint of peas or beans and four ounces of cheese, and there shall be allowed one-half pint of distilled spirits per day or ships after she had been out to sea for a few days, whereas now every battleship is sufficient unto itself in that respect and turns out 1000 tons of ice for refrigeration and drinking purposes.

In the navy of today fresh seasonal vegetables are served every day, and no matter whether the ship is porting the coast of Nodland or passing across the ocean, the cook's department's attitude is best made clear by quoting an excerpt from an intramural order service conditions are the men are always sure of getting as good fare as if they were at their own home tables. There is no occasion to have recourse to dehydrated products or food substitutes of any kind in lieu of the real thing. The navy department's attitude on the question of subsistence for the enlisted personnel with regard to the receptiveness of food substitutes such as dehydrated potatoes, dried carrots, etc., is best made clear by quoting an

In lieu thereof one quart of beer per day, including to each ration.

The last item is interesting in the light of present day regulations, which strictly prohibit liquor in the navy for drinking purposes. There were no facilities for refrigeration aboard ships in those days, consequently

there could not be any rationed items, especially liquor, available to the men.

Today, however, the pronounced by the Paymaster General of the navy, in which he stated that "the provision condition will hereafter call for any food substitute." * * * Adequate and satisfactory substitutes is the very foundation of any kind of food, whether it be dehydrated, live or dehydrated. There is no class of purchases for the naval service that needs to become so plentifully stocked that it will be difficult to furnish them fresh, however men being so "poisonous" but American sailors for whom we stand in the highest estimation in so far as abilities to the position of food.

It is of interest to note that the most notable work done by the Paymaster General in which he established that the navy was too well supplied with ships for which he came home in a fit for table, which was always well maintained, did not suit him any more.

It is of common knowledge that cleanliness is next to godliness throughout the navy and this is especially true of the sailors. Food on one side is the sailor's life, and failure of a sailor to be clean is a disgrace to himself and his ship.

The tiled floors of the galley and bakery are scrubbed many times each day, the big brass coffee pots and heating pots are cleaned inside and out daily, and all the utensils are given frequent baths both by scalding water and by the daily routine of cleanliness even claimed, because of daily inspection are frequent and at unexpected times, so that there is every incentive for those in charge of these places to maintain with precision an attitude of cleanliness which could not be put to the test if by the power of God.

"Washing the dishes," which is an inviting a task in the sailor's home, is no task at all in a battleship. Turn down in the scullery there is the most modern machinery for automatic washing and cleaning all of the mess gear, and it does this job thoroughly and quickly.

And that it is seen that Uncle Sam administers well and with concern this phase of the sailor's life. No matter how well his home table was maintained, the sailor will be well content and satisfied with his three square meals a day in the navy, and if you ask him how he likes the navy outside he will invariably answer "fully."

BAKING PIES. A CLASS UNDER INSTRUCTION IN COOKING AT THE NEWPORT COMMISSARY SCHOOL FOR COOKS.

THOSE PECULIAR FREE MASONS OF LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

The Work Shown Them Was A Fake. They Have Too Much Sense to Show the Real Work.

Among the exhibits at the San in substance and spirit, as the Francisco World's Fair, they oath which was proved on the should place, conspicuously, the Jesuits, in the french parliament, Los Angles Free Masons who and on the bishops in the English parliament signed the health certificate of the Knights of Columbus.

These Los Angeles gentlemen would not answer. They did not want to know.

Were they afraid that I would make a clear case against the Jesuits, and against the bishops; and that the Knights of Columbus would have no ground to stand on?

I asked them, if they did not read in the newspapers the fearful oath of persecution unto death which Cardinals O'Connell, Farley, and Falconio took at Rome, when those incipient treason-mongers paid upwards of $10,000 apiece for their sed hats.

Like Los Angeles gentlemen were not interested.

The did not want to be reminded that according to current newspaper report which nobody denied, these three traitors—O'Connell, Farley and Falconio—all claiming the full privileges of American citizens, went into a foreign country, bowed down before a foreign potentate, and solemnly swore to come back to America and persecute to the utmost, all their fellow citizens who would not join the Catholic church.

An alien has to swear off allegiance to foreign princes, before he can vote, hold office, or serve on a jury.

But these Roman priests, bishops, cardinals, Jesuits, Hibernians, and Knights of Columbus not only take allegiance to a foreign prince, but swear to persecute non-Catholics.

They do not act like gentlemen, when a Protestant is concerned.

They ignore a courteous letter, addressed to them personally, and signed by my name and dealing respectfully with a subject of the greatest national importance.

Would you care to know the substance of what I wrote to Messrs. Flint, Weller, Hervey and Burke?

It was about like this—

What assurance have you that the Knights of Columbus really showed you their secret papers?

Would you, as a Mason, disclose your secrets to a Roman Catholic?

Do you believe that any oath-bound secret society would voluntarily expose its secrets?

Those are fair questions, but the Los Angeles patriots refused to answer. Why?

I went further, and asked those peculiar Masons whether they knew that, under the law of Roman Catholicism, a Free Mason is classed as an atheist, and may be lawfully killed by the Catholics?

That was a fair question, and ought to have interested those Los Angeles patriots very much.

But it did not: they wanted no information on that subject.

I went further, and asked them whether they knew, that so late as the close of our Revolutionary War, the Italian pope imprisoned a Mason, in Rome, for nothing in the world except that he was a Mason, and that they put him to death in one of the terrible Italian rock-dungeons.

The Los Angeles patriots were not interested: they did not care to know that popery was murdering Masons in the days of Washington and Jefferson.

I offered to cite my authorities, and to convince these Los Angeles Masons that the law of the Roman Church, at this very day, classes them with the vilest criminals.

But these Masons did not want to know.

In regard to the disputed K. of C. oath, I asked these Los Angeles persons, if they would allow me to prove to them, from historic documents, that the alleged oath is exactly the same,

THE MISSIONARY MOVEMENT

We received a clipping from someone the other day that reads as follows:

Beginning January 3rd at Reed in the Louisville Diocese and at Corbin in the Covington Diocese Rev. J. J. Devery and Rev. J. Clinton Allard have begun the work of the missionary movement in Kentucky for 1915 and both report splendid results.

The week of January 10th they preached at Hawesville and Warren.

During the lectures one hundred copies of "The Faith of Our Fathers"

by Cardinal Gibbons will be distributed by Father Devery, which were given him for that purpose

by Father Ferry, pastor of one of the parishes in which he is preaching.

Hereafter, the gains of Rome will either come through the

through the betrayal of our

as Flint, Weller, Hervey and Burke.

Romanism will never again enrich on us by still-hunting

Did you know it's just awful

"profane" and shocking to some people's modesty to speak the word "hell" or "damn" nowadays with your mouth open?

Even if the preachers find a place

in his sermon where he can use the word "hell" to an advantage

in making an old hard-hearted

sinner jog along to the promised land, he must say "h" and then squat down behind the altar and be ashamed all over himself,

while the tetter ladies and fine-haired daddies gallop out of the door gag, and drench themselves with false modesty. I heard of a case recently where

"damn" as the nasty, meanly

little mean word, caused a poor little old one-horse editor to faint fall all over the waste-basket and narrowly escaped getting flandooled alive. Reckon he'd rather die and be buried with his mighty

on than to say bull.

I am a big, fat, greasy steer.

I am the farmer who sold the fat steer and received twenty-five dollars for it.

I am the trader who bought the fat steer of the farmer and sold it to the drover for thirty-five dollars.

I am the railroad over which the steer was shipped a hundred miles and got seven dollars for hauling it.

I am the wholesale dealer who bought the fat steer of the ship-

per and paid him forty-five dollars for it, then sold it to the factory hand and farmers at 25 cents a pound and realized sixty-

three dollars and thirty-three cents. Now, Reuben read this over six times, take a smoke and then remove the cobwebs from your old rusty think-cap by having your wife hit you a whack

over the coco with a rolling pin

and you will begin to realize what a damn fool you are.

They had one of their Priests to come to see the Editor of the Advocate, and see if he would recant what he had already said about the Catholic church, but there was nothing doing; we had said nothing that we cared to take back, and after that he has received many threatening letters

many unsigned trying to make us believe that the Advocate would soon be bared from the United States mail, well this did not disturb us in the least, we have heard the wind blow, have seen

a few skirmishes, and have really heard a few shots fired, and did not take the trembles.

Resolutions

To the Citizens of Barberville:

Whereas, the cost of equipment of said building will depend largely upon the sentiment and personal donations of our citizens since all the available money from taxes should be used in erecting the building.

LIV-VER-LAX

All the Effectiveness, Not
the Effect of Calomel

Liv-Ver-Lax is one of the most important medical discoveries of recent years. For a long time medical experts, realizing the harmful effects of calomel, have been striving to find a liver cleanser that would be just as effective as calomel, and yet be absolutely harmless in its action. Recently this remedy was actually put forth by L. K. Grigsby, in his Liv-Ver-Lax.

Liv-Ver-Lax is a harmless vegetable compound, designed solely for the treatment of liver complaints. The immediate favor it has met with in thousands of homes is proof positive of its real value.

If you feel worn out, tongue coated, and skin sallow, don't delay until it becomes dangerous, nip the trouble in the bud with Liv-Ver-Lax. Insist on the genuine, bearing the signature and likeness of L. K. Grigsby, which is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded. For sale by all druggists.
